"They screamed, we'll call ICE on you."

"I hate it here. My professor continues to discriminate against me and discredit my work."

"I always make sure I'm with another white student, and usually carry a book to not seem threatening."

The Missing BIPOC of CU Boulder

40 Silhouettes stand in for the Missing Black, Indigenous, People of Color (BIPOC) at CU Boulder.

Installed by The Radical BIPOC/Femme Collective and allied groups, the art stands in the sundail area of Norlin.

"BIPOC are 'missing' from CU Boulder because they refuse to take real action or acknowledge the disappearance as a direct result of their negligence and allowance of harm to its BIPOC community." - lead artist and organizer Alejandra Abad

The installation offers the solution of redirecting CU Police funds to:

- 1) Mental Health Professionals/Programming -to undercut police response to mental health emergency calls and offer BIPOC more access to mental health resources
- 2) Antiracism Training
- 3) Greater funding for BIPOC Centered Programming and Initiatives

"What was striking to me is the silhouettes are what is missing from CU, because that's the energy that the ARIA campus has, that UCCS has, that other Colorado university campuses have, and that we don't have."

"Being half Korea as I am. Half Korean half white. It's definitely interesting to see the space between different ethnicities on campus. I've had very good experiences with a lot of the people here regardless of race. I think that if Boulder can draw more attention to including more like diverse groups, that would be extremely beneficial."

- Adam Cerny Sophomore

"I think it's good to be confronted with these things because we don't see what's happening behind the scene. So yeah, I I really enjoy the silhouette project.."
